More Data, More Problems

FieldAware knows that the growth and stability of a company is heavily dependent on the availability of timely and reliable data. We are also aware of daily challenges that many businesses face in the battle of maintaining current and accurate information across multiple platforms. This can be no better exemplified than in the transfer of information between the field service worker and the back office.

When important information is changed, created or updated on one end of the company, it can take substantial amounts of time before it is relayed to back office systems. In the case of the field workers, this can mean a delayed or missed service visit because they were not notified of a customer’s address change. For the back office employees, the lapse of time in receiving and entering job information can prolong the invoicing process, ultimately increasing the days sales outstanding. Both of these scenarios have a negative impact on revenue.

Bridging the Data Gap

FieldAware’s integration solution with QuickBooks provides a bridge for the dreaded information gap that many companies have to dedicate resources to fill.

Utilizing the power and flexibility of our own API’s, users will be able to create and update customer information across FieldAware and QuickBooks in real-time. Invoices generated in FieldAware will be sent directly into QuickBooks, significantly reducing days sales outstanding. No more manual entry of data!
